NCOSS WELCOMES DISASTER FUNDING TO BUILD COMMUNITY RESILIENCE IN SNOWY MONARO

The NSW Council of Social Service (NCOSS) has welcomed a $488,000 funding injection from the Disaster Ready Fund to build disaster preparedness and resilience in the Snowy Monaro.

With partners, AbSec and the Local Community Services Association (LCSA), NCOSS' Community Organisations Disaster Adaptation (CODA) project builds disaster resilience and preparedness in communities across NSW and is focused on communities most vulnerable to disaster impacts.

The CODA project will build connections between the community, local social service delivery organisations and Emergency Management authorities to take action to reduce local disaster risks.

NCOSS CEO Cara Varian said this funding is an important step towards properly integrating social services into the disaster management response.

"Natural disasters disproportionately impact the most vulnerable members of society," Ms Varian said.

"A person's income, health, disability, age, geographic location and other factors impact their ability to respond when a disaster strikes.

"To date, the social service sector has had a limited formal role in responding to emergencies. But the last five years has demonstrated that social services are intrinsically embedded in a disaster response before, during and after an event.

"This funding will show the value in expanding and formalising the NGO sector's role in all phases of disaster management.

"We look forward to delivering greater disaster resilience for communities through collaboration and a strengths-based approach. This project will inform sensible recommendations to the Government and prove the value of the social service sector in the full gamut of disaster preparedness and response."

Can Yasmut, Executive Officer of the LCSA said the organisation welcomes the funding and the recognition this gives to the increasing role Neighbourhood Centres have been taking in disaster management.

"We are excited to continue our partnership with NCOSS and thank them for their leadership in developing the CODA project. It builds on the work NCOSS with the support of LCSA and AbSec have been doing with our members in developing disaster ready community organisations and building resilient communities."

NCOSS will deliver this program in conjunction with local partner Monaro Family Support Service.

Monaro Family Support Service CEO Anthony Marshall said: "This funding will enable Monaro Family Support Service to continue our essential work across the Snowy Monaro, ensuring that the most vulnerable members of our community receive the mental health support they need, heal from traumatic experiences, and build the coping skills necessary to face future disasters and challenges.

"As a place-based service, this funding will allow us to strengthen the vital social connections between emergency organisations, government, and the community, ensuring that the voices of the most at-risk members of the Snowy Monaro community are heard and supported."

CODA will be rolled out in four locations across NSW: Hawkesbury, Northern Rivers, Eurobodalla and Bega Valley on the South Coast, and the Snowy Monaro.
